Description

This internship offers students the opportunity to gain firsthand exposure to Child Protective Investigations (CPI) and child welfare services. Interns will observe and learn about the various functions of a public child welfare agency, including investigations, case decision-making, and multidisciplinary collaboration. Working alongside investigative staff at multiple levels, the intern will gain insight into the roles and responsibilities of investigators, supervisors, program directors, and regional leadership. Learning opportunities may include observing staff meetings, participating in case staffing discussions, reviewing policies and procedures, and developing an understanding service delivery. Child Protective Investigations is responsible for receiving and investigating reports of alleged child abuse or neglect, assessing child safety, identifying risk factors, and determining what interventions or services may be necessary to protect children and support families. Investigators work collaboratively with families, community partners, law enforcement, medical professionals, and the courts to ensure the safety and well-being of children.
